

The International Organisation for Cooperation in Evaluation (IOCE) is an umbrella body for evaluation networks, societies and associations. It is committed to building evaluation capacity, facilitating the development of new evaluation societies and networks, and raising awareness about evaluation and its potential contribution. It does this through supporting and working alongside existing and emerging evaluation organisations and those who sponsor, train and use evaluation expertise. The IOCE is now registered in Canada as an international not-for-profit organisation with an international Board of Trustees drawn from Africa, Latin America, Asia, Australasia, North America and Europe – including the transition countries of Eastern Europe.

There are four categories of IOCE membership

- (a) Full Members: which are existing national or regional evaluation societies, associations and networks eligible for full membership, with voting rights.
- (b) Associate Members: which are in the process of becoming national or regional societies, associations or networks.
- (c) Institutional Partners: which include international organisations, governments and foundations wishing to support and be associated with IOCE.
- (d) Affiliated Groups: which include sectoral and sub-regional or sub-national evaluation associations, societies or networks, not eligible for full membership but interested in participating in IOCE activities and committed to IOCE objectives.

Membership Fees

The IOCE has a mixed economy in which its funds come partly from external fundraising, partly from activities such as training and conferences, and partly from membership fees. The general principle of the organisation is to keep costs to a minimum. However, membership fees are essential to maintain the IOCE and its independence. The following membership fees have been set. They are in bands for two reasons: a) to recognise that different societies and groups will have different abilities to pay based both on their general circumstances as well as the numbers of members, and b) to recognise that income levels differ in different regions of the world – so we differentiate between countries/regions based on a UNDP index of national income.

Fees per annum in U.S. dollars

Membership Category	High Income/Developed Economies	Medium Income/Intermediate Economies	Low Income Developing Economies
Full Members	1,000 – 3,000	500 – 1,500	200 – 750
Associate Members	200 – 1,000	100-500	50 – 200
Institutional Partners	By agreement
Affiliated Groups	150 – 500	75 – 250	30 – 100

In addition to fees, all members will be expected to be committed to the Mission and Objectives of the IOCE and to participate actively in its programme of work. For example, this may involve discussing IOCE themes at annual conferences, hosting study visits from evaluators from other parts of the world and helping raise funds for international evaluation training events. Members may also enjoy benefits such as reduced fees for attendance at conferences and training events and priority access to international networking activities.
