Total official membership: 67 members in 14 countries b. Total informal membership: 5600 people (women and men) registered and receiving our monthly newsletter 1500 people interact in our Facebook page
1998
RedWIM started as an informal network that has evolved and now is in process of registration under Costa Rican laws. (February 2014). Bylaws have been adopted.
Members have been gradually increasing in number by 4-5 people per year. It is expected that the organization will grow in 2014 now with the legal status we have obtained in Costa Rica.
Objectives: Carry out activities to promote the development of Latin American and Caribbean women in organizational management and reduce imbalances in gender power relations. Articulate interests and encourage the participation of women in decision-making at all levels of the society. Vision: Become a recognized benchmark in Latin America & Caribbean to articulate, facilitate and implement actions in organizational management with a gender perspective. The network develops knowledge through the systematization of experiences and conducting research to help improve the management of organizations with a gender perspective. The network is strengthened through institutional partnerships, products generation and self-generation of funds, as well as by an increased and active participation of members and partners. Mission The network is known for implementing innovative and effective

- proposals to develop capacities of women and men in LAC in management of organizations with gender perspective.
- The Network provides a space for reflection, generating ideas, knowledge and suggestions to help improve the management of gendered organizations through research, technical assistance, training and partnerships with different institutions.
- Actions of the network contribute to achieving the Millennium Development Goals.

9. Current strategy and emphasis

REDWIM implements a strategy based on three pillars: a) networking: articulating people, knowledge, efforts, resources, experiences and best practices towards gender equality and women empowerment; b) capacity strengthening: through innovative interventions and services (e.g. elearning, courses for women small-business entrepreneurs); and c) information (Webpage, newsletter).

Based on these three strategies, one of our currently prioritized goals is to develop capacities of members, allies and other people in Latin America & Caribbean in all of the components of management with a gender focus, including planning, organization, direction, monitoring, evaluation and control. The aim is to strengthen gender responsiveness and managerial performance of actors in the public sector, civil society and private sector, thus increasing the potential of decision makers and technicians for effective and innovative contributions towards gender equity and equal opportunities. Our objective is also to apply advocacy and reinforce the demand and use of evaluation to inform policy making, implementation and social control.
